Read this testimonial and be convinced:

Mesors, R. E. Sellers & Co.—This is to certify that for the last sixteen years I have been severely afflicted with Rheumatism, often confined to my house and even unable to walk. Being in the post office about two months ago, Mr. Clark observed my crippled condition, and upsed me to try a bottle of Johnson's theumatic Compound. I followed his advice, and naw, by the blessing of God and the use of a half bottle of your Compound, I am free from all symptoms of rheumatism, and can walk without the aid of my staff as well as ever.

Mass Meeting to Sustain the President-Resolutions Presented to the President-His Response-He le-nonnees Stevens, Phillips and Sumper as Traitors-His Only Ambition to Restore the Union.

Washington, Feb. 22, 1866.

There was a mass meeting at Grover's Ident's policy. The edifice was crowded to its fullest capacity. A large number of persons were addressed from outside the stand. Among the speakers were Montgomery Blair, S. S. Cox, Judge Kenney, Representatives Smith and Trimble, of Kentucky, Rogers, of New Jersey, and Senators Hendricks, McDougall, and Willey. The principle meeting was presided over by P. A. Kendall, the oldest member of the Washington bar. A series of resolutions were passed strongly approving the course adopted by the President, and calling upon the citizens of every State, of every shade of political opinion, to stand by she policy adopted by him. At the close of the meeting, a procession was formed and proceeded to the open space in front of the north portice of the Executive mansion, and the committee delivered to the President the resolutions adopted by the meeting. The President soon made his appearance, and met with an enthusias-tire recention. He addressed the assemt WASHINGTON, Feb. 22, 1866.

God bless a State that has struggled for the preservation of the Union in the field and in the councils of the nation. A motto is inscribed on that stone. I stand by that sentiment, and she is willing to stand by it. It was the sentiment enunciated by the immortal Andrew Jackson—"The Federal Union—it must and shall be preserved."

My countrymen, when the existence of my country is imperilled, I will act as I have on former occasions, and speak what I think. I was saying that I had held nearly all positions from alderman through both branches of Congress to that which I now occupy, and who is there that will say Andrew Johnson ever made a pledge that he did not redeem, or ever made a promise he did not fulfill? Who will say that he has ever acted otherwise than in fidelity to the great mass of the people? They may talk about beheading a usurper, but when I am beheaded I want the American people to witness. I don't want, by Innendoes and indirect remarks in high places, to seethe man who has assassination brooding in his bosom exclaim that this Presidential obstacle must be gotter out of the way. I make use of a very strong expression when I say that I have no doubt that obstacle must be gotten out of the way.

I make use of a very strong expression when I say that I have no doubt that the intention was to incite assassination, and so get out of the way the obstacle from place and power, whether hy assassination or not. There are individuals in this government, I doubt not, who want to destroy our institutions and change the character of the government, and they are not satisfied with the blood that has been shed. Does not own state. I said time to be convention, had amended our constitution by abolishing slavery in the State, a State not embraced in the Proclamation. All this met his approbation and gave him encouragement is backing up the amendment to the Constitution. He said, "when the amendment to the constitution is adopted by three-fourths of the States, we shall have all or pretty nearly all. I am in favor of amending the Constitution for there was one other he wished adopted. SaidI, what is that, Mr. President? He saidI have labored to save this Union. I have toiled four years, I have been subjected to calumny and misrepresentation, yet my great desire has been to preserve the union of these States intact under the constitution as they were before. But, said I, Mr. President, what amendment do you refer to? were before. But, said I, Mr. President, what smendment do you refer to? He said he thought there should be an amendment added to the constitution which would compel all the States to send their Senators and representatives to the Congress of the United States;—yes, compel them. The idea was in his mind that it was a part of the doctrine of secession to break up the government by States withdrawing their Senators and Representatives from Congress, and, therefore, he desired a constitutional amendment to compel them to be sent. How now does the matter stand? In the constitution of the country, even in that portion of it which provides for the amendment of the organic law, it says that no State, without better world than this. Where is there one principle adopted by him in reference to this restoration that I have departed from? None: none.

The very policy that I am now pursuing was pursued by me under his administration, I having been appointed by him in a particular position for that purpose. An inscrutable Providence saw proper to remove him from this, I trust, to a better world, and I came into his place, and there is not a principle of is place, and there is not a principle of is, in reference to the restoration of the Thus the war is not simply upon me, but it is upon my predecessor also. I have tried to do my duty, and I know that some are curious and jealous and speak of the White House as having attractions for the President. Let me say to you that the charms of the White House have as little influence upon me as upon any individual in this country, and much less upon me than upon those who are talking about it. The difference between the little that suffices for my stomach and back, and more than enough have charms for me. The proud and conscious satisfaction of having performed my duty to my country, to my children and to the inner man, is all the reward Lask. [Great applause.]

that, economically, a no more judicious selection could have been made, as time and experience will prove.

Quite a large number of our returned soldiers, who invested in the Smith's Ferry oil territory last year, have recently realized handsome returns. It is a fact gratifying to every loyal man, that with but very few exceptions, our returned veterans are industriously and profitably engaged.

The doubtfully "conservate" gentlemen, who eighteen months ago, gleefully dianced to the music or discord of the Chicago conclave, and announced the "war a failure"—the soldiers of the Union, Lincoln's "vassais," "hirelings," and "vandais," who, when released from military rule, would devour the vitals of refined society and metamorphose the nation into a "lawless mobisorayes whom they have so wantonly slandered, and who are doing so much to accumulate wealth and dignify labor. It is noteworthy, that the only drones or loafers we have here, are the cravenhearted wretches, who could not conscientiously engage in an "Abolition war." and who were so tremplous and

The President.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

Several circumstances combine to produce a popular misunderstanding of the principles of the President, and the application that he makes of them to current affairs. Let it be well considered that the strength of the opposition to the President, by the Union party as represented in Congress, and the approbation which he receives from the Democracy, do not affect the merits of the case, and are incidents that wise men will not allow to have weight in makmade an issue with Congress, and should be rebuked for his want of complacency. Perhaps a careful investigation would prove that his principles have been fixed, and his policy progressive in a right line. If any persons project themselves against a fixed object, they would be unreasonable to complain that it declined to get out of the way. The President has not provoked a quarrel with Congress, but has assiduously endeavored to avoid it. More than this, the very extreme doctrines prevalent in Congress, and an endorsement of which is demanded as a test of adhesion to the party of the Union, are those that the supporters of the Government were, during the years of war, charged by the disaffected with, holding, and which they emphatically denied that they held.

The main charge against the President is that he is in favor of thrusting

The main charge against the President is that he is in favor of thrusting rebels into Congress. It is a charge that can not be substantiated. He favors the determination of the question of the admission or relection of

from a particular State.

As a practical repudiation of the bloody heresy of State Sovereignty, this could not be bettered. It allows the representation in Congress of a loyal district in East Tennessee, and excludes a disloyal district in Mississippi, the Southern people the
